Youthful Experimenters With Fire Plugs
Annoy the Police.

The police have been annoyed for several days by the act of boys in turning on a fire plug full force and letting it rum. On Thursday night some of these half-grown youths devised a wrench to fit the octagon tops of the plug screws, and with this turned on the plug at Foushee and Franklin. Evidently the same gang of youngsters repeated the performance sherily before 10 c'clock last night at the plug at the corner of Adams and Franklin. Several police officers were attracted by the noise of the escaping stream and sought in vain to detect the identity of the culprils. Several thousand gallons of water escaped hefore a wrench could be secured from the Brook Avenue engine house and the escape of water stopped. It is thought by the officers that the boys made a crude wrench to fit the plug and with this turned it on.
